COSCITATION OF RESTRICT OF THE SERVICES AND ADDRESS AN

SERVES ZOOO'
R.L. STINE

Be Afraid— Be Very Afraid!

There's a new bea

y name is Connor Buckley, and I are the King of Evil.

Well, no. I'm not weathy the King of Evil. That's the character I decided to play in the eard game.

What card game?

I'll get to that later. But let me tell you this case you choose a character, you're stuck with it. You have to be that character every time you play the game.

Then, every eard you pick, every roll of the dice, means something important to your character...

Unless you die.

My friends and I had never tried any roleplaying games. But as soon as we opened the box of cards and began to check them out, we were hooked. We had no idea how went the game could become.

Or how dangerous.

I'd better start at the beginning, bly friend Emily Zinman always tells me to slow down. "Cool your jets, Connor." That's what she says. "Take a deep breath. Count to ten. Try some decas."

Decaff I don't drink coffee. I'm twelve years old! Coffee testes like bitter mani to me!

I can't help it. I have a lot of energy. I know I can't keep still. I'm always bounding off the walls, talking a mile a minute, densing, hopping, bepring

So, what's the problem? Can I help it if other people are sloodoow?

It was nearly the end of summer, and Emily and I were bored.

Long, but days with nothing to do. Only a couple of weeks until school started.

We had read all of our summer reading books. We had played every computer game we own a thousand times. We had survived our family vacations with only a few dozen moreuito bites. We aware, played termis, hung out with friends, laughing and doing nothing.

And now we were totally bored.

We were sitting under the split maple tree in my front yard. Actually, Emily was perched in the split part of the trunk.

You see, the tree was hit by lightning last year and split right down the middle. Hulf the trunk bent one way. The other half bent the other it looks like twin arches.

Most people would probably have the true dug up and carried away. But my purents are welrd. Actually, they're meditects. They design houses. They're very artistic.

They thought the spirit rep backed like a piece of acaleture. So they kept it. It's netually great for sitting on and climbing.

But Emily and I had been sitting on it and elimbing it all summer, and we were burrenswich.

Did I montion that we were bored?

I was sitting on the ground in the shade of the true, politing up dumps of grass and tossing them at Emily. Yes, I know it's not right to rip up the grass. But I can't just sit there. I have to keep my hands busy.

The back of my neck started to itch, I reached buck and polled off a blg black ant.

From her perch in the tree. Emily laughed, I guessed that abe had plucked the ant off the tree trunk and dropped it down my shirt.

"Give me a break," I muttered.

"Make ma," she replied.

We were so bored, we were turning stupid.

"Maybe I'll go bome and streak my hair," she sighed.

I turned another clump of grass at her. "Your hair is already streaked," I said. She came back from vacation with light bland streaks through her brown hair.

"Maybe I'll streak it some more," she said. "I beed a new look for when school starts."

"You need a new face?" I told her,

She didn't laugh, She never laughe at my jokes. But I keep trying.

"Hey — what's going on over there?" she asked, jumping down from the tree. She brushed off the back of her white tennis shorts and stepped beside me.

I jumped to my foot and gazed down the block. A bunch of people warn gathered at the house on the next corner. "Louks like a garage sale," I said, pulling a twig off Emily's shoulder.

"At Mr. Zarwid's house? Weird!" Emity ex-

Yes, it was definitely weird. Mr. Zarwid in the neighborhood grouch. He isn't friendly to anyone, and he hates kids.

Last fall, I knocked on the front door of his creopy old house and tried to sell him some candy burn for our school fund-raiser. He sent his hig Common shapherd after me.

I'm a fast runner — but I out Olympic records that day!

What could weird old it? Zarwid to colling? I wondered. I started half running, half skipping down the driveway. "Let's check it out?"

Emily stayed back, "1—1 don't like that man. He was really mean to my sisters. He—"

"Let's just see what he's selling," I called back to her. I was already halfway down the block, "It's probably torture racks and bullwhips and chain saws!" I joked, Rmilly didn't laugh.

As we made our way across Mr. Zarwid's nestly trimmed front yard, we new four or five neighbors in front of the open garage. They were pawing over items for sale.

Not bullwhips and chain saws. The usual gurage-sale things. I atepped up to the first table and now a stack of old heating-and-lishing magazines, a shiny pair of old-fashiomed-looking shoes, dented binoculars, an ashtray shaped like an occun

Hor-rening.

"How much is this?" A woman held up an oil painting in a fancy gold frame. It showed a suil-bost in a purple sunset.

"Twenty," Mr. Zarwid called. He sat on a folding chair just inside the garage, leaning back with his thin vellow arms folded behind his head.

He has wary white hair parted in the middle and a white mustache that's really weird. It stands out straight from both sides of his square red face. I never saw a mustache do that.

But it's his eyes that really give use the creeps.

His mean little blue eyes always eeem to be glaring angely. He scowls and matters to himself a lottoo.

He was wearing baggy, stained kineki shorts and a sleeveless red T-shirt that just bursty covered his big belly. I could see tufts of white hair on his chest.

The warran leaned the painting against the table.

"If you break it, you take it," Mr. Zarwid called in the scratchy, high voice. Then he eackled to himself, his white mustache bobbing up and down.

Emily flipped through an old book of nursery rhymes. "Let's go," she whispered, giving me a push toward the street, "This is all funk."

A table half hidden inside the garage caught my eye. It seemed to have descent of anuli statues on it. Ignoring Smily, I jugged around a rack of old coats into the garage.

I stepped over to the cluttered table to examine the figures. They weren't statues, I discovered. They were candlesticks, I saw dragons and cives and strange animals and measters carved out of dark wood.

I picked one up to study. It appeared to be half man, half horse.

Emily stepped beside me. "Grees," she muttered. "Check this one cut." She reised a fut creature with a long rattail. "That one looks like you!" I joked. "Before you streaked your hair."

Emily didn't laugh,

"Hey, you kids," I heard Mr. Zarwid rasp, "What are you trying to steal?"

He climbed to his feet and stood staring at us, with those mean blue eyes, scowling angelly, hands on his hips.

Emily dropped the curved condestick to the table. "We - we're not stanking anything," she stammered.

"We're just looking," I edded,

"This stuff isn't for kids," the old man growled.
"Maybe you should go home and play with your toldy bears."

Teddy becars?

I could see everyone staring at limity and res. My face felt hot, I losew I was blushing.

"We weren't doing snything!" I protested.

"I've seen you young hoodhams before," Mr. Zarwid replied.

Hoodluma!

He didn't move. He was staring us down, his cold blue eyes moving from Emily to me.

"Let's go," Emily murmared. "He's . . . erazy."

I followed her out of the garage. We brushed past two women from the neighborhood who were staring at an accusingly. Squamed through a row of cluttered tables, leaded down with junk.

That we both tack off sunning.

I didn't look back. We didn't stop until the gut to my backgard. I pulled open the kitchen door and we hurried isside

"Anyone home?" I called breathlessly.

No. No reply.

Still breathing hard, I reached into the pocket of my shorts and torsed something unto the kitchen table.

"What's that?" Emily demanded.

I grinned at her.

"Connor - what is that?" she repeated.

My grin grew widor, "Samething I stole," I told her,

Her mouth dropped open in abock. "You toked?"
"He had no right to accure us," I said. "He had no right to embarrans us like that, So I got angry.
And I grabbed comething off a table when we run."

Emily narrowed her eyes at me. Then the turned to the small rectangular box. "What is it?" she demanded. "What did you steel?"

2

pteked it up and tossed it to her. "Tlunk

She grabbed for the Missed. And it sailed arross the sitchen floor.

I down under the breakfast table and picked it applies the floor, "Li's a deck of early."

She squared ut me. 'Cards' What a damb thing outed. You don't like to play can't gumes remember?'

Show right. I can't six still for eard games. I get too motions, i gazari ut the box and rend the words out had-

Entity stated at me. "Excuse me?"

"That's the name of the sard gumo," I told her "Bo Afraid."

"Weind," also meathered.

I opened the box and slid out the deck of cards.
"Check deese out," I mucmured.

I dipped through them quickly. The cards all had pictures in thom. Firtures of masked knights, evil-making distances, dragons, hocky links guys with pag faces

"Awesome graphics," I said

"Consor these cards look really old," Emily repaired. "Maybe they're valuable Maybe you should neturn here.

I opesed my counts to reply that before Legald atter a count, a voice from nearby busined, "Proname to dist/"

I cried out, startled, and the cards fell from my hand. They scattered over the floor.

As I bent to pick them up, the kitchen door swang open. "Prepare to die!" our friend Kyle Boots repeated atompung mavily into the kitchen, Kyle is big and alone as a powerful-rooking, and he likes to scare people. He plays tackle on our junior high football team. But he's as big as some of the high school players.

Kylo's claum to farms as that his voice changed when he was eleven. He loves chowing off his deep, deep voice—capacially around the rest of us, who still sound like side. When he booms out "Propage to die!" it's pretty awasome.

"What's up, guys^{tri} he demanded, gezing down at me. "What are you doing down there. Common* Looking for crumbs?"

"How" "rumbet" i gathered up the last of the

"That's what my dog does." Nyle replied.

I slimbed to my feet "I'm not your dog."

"I know," Kyle replied. "I can tell the difference. My dog a samet."

Earnity Integried as Total

What is been given by

"thick these out," I said, shoving the cards toward livie.

"Connot state a deck of well-d cards," Easily reported.

Kyle againted at me. "You stole there?" He glaneou at the box on the taula. "Oh. Be Afraid. Yeah, sure, I know that game."

You know at?" I naked.

The norbied, his blone hair falling over his broad forehead. "Yeah. I've played it with nome older gays. He brushed the bau back with his big hand.

"How do you play" Emily asked

"It's a cole-playing game," Kyle explained. "You know. Evil kings and krachte and dragons and shall. Lots of battles. Magic. Screeny. There are honoreds of different clocks, Kirk collect cheat."

He grabbed the curds from my hand, "Let's see which one you got."

He surned the cards over, raised them dose or his face, and began to shuffle Jurough them stowly

Smitterily, he stopped and starred at one of the cards Starred until his eyes bulged.

"Ob. no?" Kyte cried to horror "No! I don't befleve it!"

felt my heart side a best "Kyle — what?" I greed, "What's wrong?"

A smile slowly spread arross his beefy face. His brown eyes dashed merrily. "Gotcha," he whispered Emily tossed back her head and saighed again. Why does also think Kyle is such a riot?

Kyle crossed the room to the refrigerator. He opened the door, searched the shalves, and pulled out a can of coke.

"Help yourself," I mustered.

He had already opened the top and tilted the can over his open mouth. He let the sode pour down his throat, gulping notelly, unto he'd emptied the can. Then he busped long and tout and toused the can on the counter.

"Let's my the game." he suggested. He dropped into a chair at the kitchen table and begun shuffling through the Be Afraid eards.

Emily sat down scross from him with her back to the kitchen window. Late afternoon soultight poured through the window, making both of them glow.

"Comor, go get some dice," Kyle ordered "Wo need at least four Have you got them?"

"I think so," I replied. "I'll go see."

I was to the den, where we keep all the board games. I toro open the boxes and searchest until I board four disc.

When I returned to the kitchen, Kyle had divided the deck into four near enacks. The cards were all facedown.

I dropped the thes onto the cable and took a seat "How do we play?" I saked Kyle.

"I divided the dock into four piles," he explained, tapping such stack with his inger "Lharacter cards, Power cards, Action tards, and Pate cards First you have to choose the character you are going to play."

He showed one of the piles of cards across the table to me. "Pick a Character card. From any-where to the deck."

I picked up the cards and pulled one from the moddle. I turned it over and studied it. "King!" I declared. "Hey—that's cool. I'm a king!"

"That's not fair." Emily protested. "Why did

Connor go first? We should roll the dice for it or cometiung. Why should be be king?"

"Since I've played before. I'll make the rules." keyle tolo Endly, showing the stack of earth toward ber, "It's a very complicated game. It takes months to rearn."

"But of Connor is king -" Emily started

"Being king is no big deal," Kyle interrupted.
"He might be a really weak king. He might be a cotal loses. We haven't drawn our Proves cards yet."

Kyle grinned. "Contor might be a powerless king Maybe even a helpitess slave to one of as!"

"Yeak. That's what I want to be," Emily said

"Someone more powerful than the king."

"In your dreams," I muttered. "As soon as wo start, I'm going to have both of your heads out of?"

Kirolly thousand across the cable at see, "That's norms, Connec," she said softly.

"Just pick a character" Kyle sighed. "Any time this year."

Emily shut her eyes and picked a Character card. She attitled it. "A Goth? Yuck. What a Goth?" she cried, unable to hide her disappointment.

Kyle took the used from her. "A Goth is a muant sorrerer" he tool her.

Emily brightened a little, "A surcoror? You mean , have magical powers?"

"Maybe," Kyle replied.

Emily turned to roe, "Maybe .'Il turn the king into a frog " she .hreatened.

I replied with some croaking sounds. I do a really good frog imitation. Very foul and very realistic. Ask anyone Kyla skammed the table with his firt. As the cards houseout "Come on, guys," he pleades. "Let's take the game seriously."

I stopped my frog sounds. When Kyle wants people to be serious, they'd better get serious.

Kyle shuffled the Churacter cards. Then he picked one, "I'm a Krel," to unnounced.

He showed as the card it had a pointing of an ugiy dwarf-creature with pink pointed ears and an aurman aneat. The Krel wore a furry red but and carried a curved dagger.

"What exactly is a Krel?" I asked. "Is a good of bus!"

"Depends," Kyle answeren.

"In a Guth more powerful than a Kreft" Emily asked

"Depends," Hyle replied again

He shoved the dice coward ms. "Now we're going to roll for power points Go shead Roll all four dice. Now we'll see what's what. You get a bundred power points for every point on the dice."

We took turns rolling the dice. I rolled all fives and sizes, "Yessy" I cried. "Power! I've got the power"

Entity and Kyle both miles two, and through "The hing in very powerful," Kyte announced solemnly. He turned to Emily "You and I will have to work together, or we don't stand a chance."

I jumped up, pumped my fists above my head.

and let our a cheen "The king rules!" I cried.

"We'll see about that," Kyle growled.
"Sit down, Connor," Emby ordered

"It's King Connon" I corrected her, But I throughed back into my chair

"Let's get started," Kyle said. "The game is like an ancient story, Show your eyes. Protend we're in ancient times. We live to a forest, At the edge of the forest stands a cell easite."

"My earle!" I atterrupted.

Ryle ignored me. He invered his voice to a deep whoper "The forest is filled with all kinds of danger "times countries. Marked knights Mutant streamers. Know are such and Mords and ackels sessions. Know are such and Mords and ackels session unimals, poleonous plants, evil encours timbing everywhere."

I a stide stack of cards in front of me. "Start the notion. King. Pick the top card and turn it over. Then prepare yearsalf for whatever comes."

White-telr comes?

Something about Kyle's solomo expression, his sleep voice, his serious, dark eyes — sent a chilt dawn my back.

I guilled the top card off the deck and rurned it over

It abowed a fat yellow lightning bolu

I sat the card on the table.

Ana as I did. I beard a boud cruckle.

And sow a bright yellow halt of lightning nut the kitchen window

"Whose" Leried out.

It was bright sunshine out there. Where did the lightning come from 2

I grabbed the ourd.

Another crackling sound. Another flash of lightning.

And in the pagged bolt of light, I saw a face an ugiy, evil, twisted face, green in the serie glow—pressing against the window, gloring in at us.

let out a cry and jumped up. My chair toppled over backwards and elattered to the kitchen theor.

Thursday beamed outside the window. Very these accept hour the sound bounce of the bouse

The lightness flickered. And in its fiding glow- a recognitional the face:

Mar. Vanewood!

He pressed close to the window, has tiny, round pyse peering in at us. Then he motioned with one hand toward the kitches door.

I took a deep breath and made my way to the dust "What is he doing bere?" a cried.

As I pulsed open the door another may of thender shook the bouse. Italin puttered on the back stoop. The old trees in the backyand best and grouned in the guesting wind. How did the weather change so fast? I wondened.

Hunching in the man, his white hear slicked down over his forchess), Mr. Zarwid climited anto the back steps

He had pulled a yellow rain slicker over his sleeveless T-shirt and chorts. Droplets of rain glistened on the slicker. He assenwed his gyes at me

"I (bought one of you lived here," he suct in his seratchy, thin make. His mustache moved wetly over his lip.

He gazed over my choulder at Tyle and Emily. Emily stood up from the table and made her way bonds me.

I new you at my grouge sale," Mr Zarwel said, eyeing the both suspectionally, "A deak of cards by missing," He desired his chroat. His siny eyes moved from Early to me. "You don't know anything about it... do you."

I saw Emily cod. She opened her mouth to confess. I could see she was going to sell the crath.

"Yo, we lost" quickly offer-upted. "We don't know anything about it."

Mr Zarwad tilites, his head slightly still studying us. "Are you sure?"

"Of course, we're sure," I replied "We didn't steat your camis. We lon't steat Mr. Zarwid."

He nestries, nationing bin chie, "The rain started to wurse down harder. Rain dripped from the slicker anto the stitchen floor.

Its teamed into the house. Leaned toward Emily and roe. Leaned very close, so close we could arnell peppermint on his breath.

"I hope you're telling the truth," be said softly, through gritted teeth. "Because the sands .hes'es not a same."

I felt a shover of fright, but I stared back at him. We had do you mean."

Tr's not a game," he repeated. "It's very dangerous.

"You you're kidding, right?" I stammered,

"Be afraid, he whaspered "Be very afraid."

Then he swept the yellow slicker around him, armed quickly and versibed into the storm.

I atook frozen beside builty for a second, his words ringing in my ears. Then I shut the intcher door and locked it

We turned buck to Kyle, who had hidden all the cases behind him. All three of us burst out mughue

"When a Joke" I cried. Then I did a pretty grad mutation of Mr Zarwid. "He offered Be very offered.

"Is at for real?" Kyle conlaimed, He arranged to sends back on the table. "Is he for real, or what?"

What's the big deal?" Emily demanded. "I mean, one on They're just cards."

Still snickering, I pucked a card off the cop of the deck

Bolio banek

I set it down on the table — and all the lights went not.

hose!" I nearly full off my

"What's your problem?" Emply demanded. "It's just the storm."

"I — I don't think so." I stammered. "I picked a ightning card, and there was lightning. Now I picked a black card, and all the lights went out."

I jumped up. I fambled for the light weitch on the wall. I clicked it about a dezen times. No ights

"Cool your jets," Emily spirit.

"The lights always go out when it storms," Kyle chimed in. "I don't think we should freak out."

"Let's play in the dark," Emily suggested.
"That will be really cool."

I had a better idea

I made my way into the diving room and came lasek with the randle-trees from the table. It took a while to find matches in the dark, that a few minutes rater was testing, into the orange glow of establetishing sweet the kitchen cable.

"Let's begin again," Kyle said in his deep solemn roice. "Emily draw an Action card."

Emily draw a could see it. It showed crossest swards upder a stary batch believe.

"The Goth has conjured an army," Kyle said "The king's castle is under attack. The king must go out and conquer another castle."

"How do I do that?" I resent.

Thursder hoomed autside. Rain dinammed against the kitchen window. The quotile flames bent thekered, then rose up straight again.

"You have to rake an army too," Kyle inscructed He showed the four dice across he able "You get a hundred souther-knughts for every dowble you roll."

I enppose the dies to my hands and shook them. "Are you making up at these rules?" I asked Kyte

"That's how you play these games, Connor," to replied, tapping his fingers imputiontly on the tabletop. "I told you - I've played this game be fore."

"Come on, Stop shaking them. Boll the dice. Emily grouned

I opened my hands and sent the dice rulling across she table. Three fours and a six

"A triple," Kyle said, leaning into the candleight to see the like clearly "That gets you three hundred saidlers.

Excellent "I declared "What do I do next Do scopped when I heard voices. Men's voices.

 Low soughter: A house whitenying, Shouts turned to the window Too dark to see out The Pakt had seft a curtain of water over the glass.

B'com autaide™

"Ho you hear hat" I whispered

".4's he run pounding the trees." Emily replied 'What a starm! And it came out of nowhere

"Roll the ruce again." Kyle enstructed, "You need more strights. You can't defeat a castle with only three hundred knights."

i vilked agam. No doubles.

Benity taughted. "I want to cast another spell on the same."

"11's not your care," Kyle told ber.

whered for the voices outside But all I could our way the count which and pounding rain.

The courts flames flickered and bent. All three of as teamen over the table to see better

villed he doe again, Agapa

Finally, I had enough knights to strack the atherenstic

"Rost all four dice" Kyle instructed. "A very powerful king lives in that cashe More powerful than you. You have to roll at least a evenly to win his castle."

"That a too hard," I grumbled.

Entity had but eyes shut. She was motioning toward me with one hand.

"What is your problem?" I asked.

"The Goth is costing a spell on the dice," Emily replied. "You're going to roll all open, Connor. Howide study even."

"You're sade," I muttered.

I shook the dice between my hands and sent them distering onto the table.

Two suces, a five, and a four. Twenty-one!

"I did it. I smushed the other countries I cried, burnoing up and purpoing both field in the say

I frame when becam the dealening crash.

As alone of an aried out.

"What was that?" Emily gasped, her eyes wide with frield.

"Tt sounded like an explosion," Kyle mutantred.
"Or maybe a cur crash, heard angry roscen Loud shouts.

·figh, shrill criss.

Cries of attack?

And then a furious clatter. Like metal changing against metal.

Swords?

More orice and groups

I glanced out the window - then quickly looked eway T really didn't want to see what was out those

* a wounds like a hatale," kannly declared an all fragmented they voice

"I a thirth sike tion. I starrangeed, "a think we have to stop this same."

My hands shouk as I swept them over the cards I ga herest them all up. Shoved them into a pile Strughtened them and then glid them back into the back.

I closed the box and the lights flushed back on.

"Hey" I choked out blinking in the bright light "What's group on hore?" Emily saked, hands correspondent her cheeks, "Why die he lights go back on when you closed the card box?"

"R use a coincidence, that a μω." Myle said.
"No big dear"

Hut Kyin from when we beard the footsteps Funtations trending down the half. Moving towars us at the kitchen, Moving fast

We all shaleked us an ugly dwarf-creature burst much the room.

6

rouly arregard. Ryle cose to he feet, that ut his sides, roudy for a fight 1 jumped been against the wall, my heart pounding

The dwarf-creature tossed his big, round head back and let out a shrill, high-pitched lough

He had black carry hair down past his shoulders and a short black board. His greep eyes rolled witch in his heart. He had an animal snear to place of a ness. He wore a dark for vest, very hairy, over black test her pants, and farry brown slippers that came to a point.

"I'm fron!" the dwarf-creature proclaimed, shooting at the top of his lungs. He waved his tiny hands high over his head. "I'm free as a bird! Thank you Thank you all!"

"Hey, wait!" | cyted.

But he scampered over the floor. Pulled open the kitchen door And vanished into the rain.

Emily sunk into her char, her hands will present against her cheets. Kyle didn't move. He still had his hands balled into tight face, ready for a tight.

I swedlowed hard and waited for my heart to

SHAME TO WAR DOLL

Kys. Bually backs, he silence: "A Krei. That guy war a Kert," he nonemarcal, abaking his tiesd.

I was proved again I stated out to window Tack out light as open out I couldn't see anything out here.

" a tooked just like the Keet in the pile of Charnetter cards," Emily said.

"Haih?" I greed down at the He Afraid box. "Youth He did."

- grabbed the box and spilled the cards unto the kitches table. I began shuffling frantically through the cards. "Where is that card? Where is the
- . Sipped through every card to the bottom of the dack. No hard cure
 - I went too fast. I know it's in here," I was
- pushed the deck together and started going through it again, slower this sime, concludy studying each card.

The king, a mutant dwarf, worse Jekel cards, swo Cothe, a masked knight

"Come on, Come on," I chanted, dropping each card to the table

"JCs grac," I manusceed, ruising my eyes to my two friends. "The Krel card has disappeared."

"Let me see those." Kyle enapped, scowling.

He grabbed for the deck and a card slid off be cable and fell to she floor.

bent quickly to pick it up.

A dragon card.

At abswed an enormous dragon, wild-syed, its head arched high, mouth open in a furious mar flames shooting out of its nostrals

I grabhed the ouril

And hourd slow, heavy, lumbering footstops in the half.

be draging!" I gasped.

I consed the card onto the table.

Profly and Kyle stood frozen, eyes wide, muchs open.

"It's the dragon," I repeated, furning to the decrease.

"Lonpor" What dragon?" a familiar voice called.

You and Dud stroke into the kitchen, drenched from the tain. Mom's curly brown bur was matted that on her head. Raundrops slid down her checks.

Dud's blue work shirt was socked through.

"h we were playing a game," | explained.

No hands were shaking 1 granhed the edge of me able springly couldn't see them.

As reast you didn't get taught to that sodden stownpour." More and, lacking off her sosked suchkers.

Dad stepped up to the table "Did you see what happened out! door? Didn't you hear the commotion,"

"What a disaster" Mom added, "The poor Net-

"High" What happenery" I demanded.

Dad shook rainwater from his hair. "Go calor a took, It, ~ it's preredible"

"I can't believe you didn't hear it " More said ferwiller.

I took off to the Ritchen door threw it epen, and burst outside. Emily and Kyla followed close behard me.

The run had support The heavy, dark clouds were pulling apart allowing shafts of late after poor samight to filter through.

I ran past the wooden picket fence that separates our yards. Then I slid to a stop on the wet grass as the Nelsons' house came into view.

, should pay, whose was left of cheir bouse).

The horse had been trushed.

The windows were all broken, Shutters say senttered over the wat ground. One wall was on its wide, clumps of bracks everywhere. Half the roof had fallen into the house.

The hedge stong the front walk had been trampled. The flowers in the parties at the side had all been upromed. The matibox lay on its side in the matibo.

Neighbors circled the house in a husbed should

I saw Me and Mrs. Nelson alking to two grietfaces: police officers! They were both calking furinally at once greatering wildly with their hands.

"West happened?" I asked one of our neighbors.
"Was it the action?"

She shrugged. "I don't think so. The Nelsona Pay they were attraction."

EBNINA).

truken glass and moved above. "It was some kind of army" he declared, shaking his head. "Thry were dressed op — like knights or something."

Haughton's

Mrs. Neissm started or solt "It was so forgitcoung!" she cried. "They were on horseback. They they were restal helmets. We couldn't see their faces. They they "Her husband slid his arm around her, trying to corefort her.

"They attacked the house." On Neison call the differe. "It was like a movie or something. I know it sounds energy But it's the crutic Knights on moradwek, attacking our house."

shrank back. My throat hightened, I couldn't swellow bly sega equidenty felt work

It was un't a province known.

D was our game He Afraid.

 a the game sent my knughts to attack the neighboring castle.

And he Nelsons were attacked by an army of musico smette.

I suddenly fult seek. I covered my mouth. Waited for my stomach to settle down.

What can I do' I saked myself flow can I wa-

The police officers were arguing with the helsons. They didn't believe the wild story

But I did.

I knew this was my fault. I knew the card game had caused this.

tooked up and saw someone staring at me from the deep shadows behind the transpled hedge, its stepped over the hedge, our into the light.

Mr. Zarwid.

His eyes maked on me, his expression set in a cold second.

 took a step back. Prepared to run to the safety of my bouse.

Mr. Zarwid moved quickly, taking long strides across the war grass. His yellow slicker flew behand fam. His hig helly bounced up and down with such step.

"Anything you want to tell me, young man?" he ranged, staring hard into my eyes. Anything you want to tell me about my missing deck of cords."

He ignowe, a realized. Mr. Zarwid knows that I stole his card game.

What does he plan to do? What is he going to do to me*

r. Zarwid's tiny, round eyes humed into mine like fasers. Beneath the stiff white quastache, he muttered angrely to himself, his face set in a deep frown.

I swallowed hard, I can't cell him the truth, I deeided. I can't tell him that I stale his care game.

I can't tell depose that I'm responsible for the attack on the Nelsons' house.

Bohind Mr. Zarwad, the police officers were shading their heads. Clustered in small groups, the neighbors were multisring in low voters their expressions confused.

"I den't know anything." I teld Mr. Zarwid in a crembling voice. My thudding heart seemed to rise into my throat, choking me. I coughed. Took a weep breath. "I don't know anything about your deck of cards," I repeated.

Then I upun away and started to run over the alick, wet grass

I had to get away. I had to think about this I had so think hard, to stoude what I should do.

I didn't wait for Emily and Ryle, I didn't turn back.

I kept manning until I reached the safety of the house. Then transportants sharming my bestroom door behind me.

Breathing hard, my entire body drenched in a cold sweat I dropped down anto the edge of my bed. Head spinning, heart pounding

I about my eyes and saw the hold lettering on the court game boto de AFRADO, DE VERY AFRADO.

That night, I dresuped about Mr. Zarwad.

Dressed at in white, a white suit, white shirt, white the — all no white as his bair and mustache — he case up in front of me.

In the dream, he lifted his hands high above his head and boomed, "Be of road, Consur."

And hen he curred to the door and waved his arms as if directing scalin.

I saw myself sit up in hed. I saw my startled ex-

I heard heavy footsteps outside my room. Grunts and cries and loud mostle.

Mr. Zarwid waved his arms burdet. He tossed back his braut has white mor falling to his shoulders, and let out a bounding stagh. A knight to shirty gray armor tromped into my room. His broad should banged against the eide of the doorway.

Hoy garaway I I enert out.

In the driving knew I was driving But lear clades my direct and intered a shall scream as other figures followed the clumping knight Goths and Kreis Resaded dwarf-creatures with annual sunges. Masked lengths. Creatures with pug heads and human bodies.

Toward back their bearts, hey howled and greaten and backet tike animals.

So land. So mud. I covered my ears.

But I couldn't drawn out the sound of their ground and cross as they began to fight

Shishing at each other with swinds and long-bladed, gleaning daggers, fleaving horselves, banking arrange, chest, against armone, chest, Thrusting heir shields in front of dean, acreaning and crying.

They cambed over my bed. Stashed the window curvains. Sent everything on my desk clausering to the foot:

A battling Kret sent a masked trought toppling backwards into my backword window. The glass rightered and fell in a thousand pieces. A sword vipoed through the wallpaper.

"Get out Get out Got out" I shreeked. A desperate errified gloom

"tact out! Get out!" I woke up screaming. And trembling Drenched with awest. My pajama shirt stuck wetly to my back

I sat up in bed, wide swales. Orange membry surlight streamed durough the curtisate.

The window - not broken. Not broken.

The waltpaper not stashed.

I breathed a sigh of relief tast started to climb a my feet.

Hat I dropped back down when I saw my float The carpet staused with must. Muddy foot prints. Dosens of them, but and aman.

Muddy footprints asked over the rug-

"No?" A terrified cry escaped my throat

"(the time courts," I maintained out roud. I hugger greedf, aried as force royself to stop staking

"it's the card game."

I had so get rid of the card game. I know wasn't eafe white I will had it. I had to return it to Mr. Zarwid.

I pulled myself to my feet t'il mburn there right now, I decided l'il ge drawed and run them over to Mr. Zerwid's house Maybe l'il just leave the deck on his front stoot Yes Thar's d.

No need to talk to him. No need to bear his Muture about how steading is strong

I know all that. I've learned my lesson.

I began to feet a little better, a little near spearly. I had a plan. I know what so do. I willow on a pair of journ and a T-shirt. My hunds trembled as I tied my absolvers.

I took a deep breath.

Connor, you're going to be okey, I told myself. You're going to return the cards, and your life will be cottagy normal again.

Where did I seave the cards? On my dresser.
Okay Okay No problem
In a few minutes, everything will be fine again.
I crossed the room to my dresser.

and gasped.

My hands furabled over the clutter on the director top. No. No cards.

Franticulty, I pulled open the drawers not searched No cards

I dropped to my kneer and looked under the drepper his cards.

I hearri voices from downstains. A gori's laugh, a chair scraped.

Oh. West I must have self the earth downstairs On the kitchen cable.

Shaking my head, I disabed to my fort and but nied flown to the kitchen.

"Heyt" I cried out in surprise. Emily and Kylsut at the kitchen table. Kyle had reparated to duck of cards into the four piles. "We've been waiting for you," Esnily said. "We don't want to wake you."

"Grab some breakfast and ret's play." Kyle arged. He shuffled one of the stacks of cards.

"No way?" I cried. "Put the cards back in the box, Kyle I'm returning them to Mr Zarwid Right saws.

"Hub" Kyle's mouth dropped open. "You can't do that. We're in the modile of a game."

"You just defeated a caetia," Emily chimed in.
"You're wirming. You have to give the Goth and the Krel's chance to eath you."

No way?" I separted again, "What's among with you two? The game is too dangerous, Didn't you see the house next door? Mr. Zarwid warned up. He exid..."

"Fluid a encopy old gay" kyle amound. "Fluid house kells. You lead to be "

"He was just trying to some us," Emily sort, shuffing a pile of carris. "You didn't full for that warming did you, Comor? It was so turns."

"But but " I sputzered "The Nelsons house"

"It got wrecked in the storm," Kyle said.

"Put it didn't start to storm until we drew a lightning card?" I excluded shrilly

They both laughed, "Whee, Do you really think you can control be weather now, Connor*" Hyle demanded

"Sit down," Emily ordered. "You're waiting time We could be playing."

I stared at them both. I could see they but their minds made up. They were going to keep playing no matter what I said.

tikay, okay," I mottered.

I poured myself a glass of crange haice Then I cook my place at the table. 'One more game "I mested "I mean it guys. One more. That's all. Then I return the deck to Mr. Zarwid."

Ensity shaffled the cards in her hand. Then she sat them facedown on the table

A., three of us tesped forward as she started to draw a card

I felt a chill at the back of my neck

Should we have stopped? Were we making a hopeitile metake?

Emily drew a card. Turned it over

And Hies out a cey-

mily surned over a dragon card.

On the front of the card, the dragon took up, deep silver its long neck polled back as if ready to attack. Long matalic spikes stood straight up anguily, exceleting the longth of the back its chest appeared plated, as if it were wearing senior Broad silver wings poked up from its shoulders.

The drugon's long report was open in a rear revealing owe cows of pagged seeth. The flaving postells shot out twin flames, sed fire and smoke.

The three of us stored at the eard. "Emily, pick a Fate card," Kyte instructed. He showed another stack of cards toward her Early haritates for a moment. Then she pulled the eard off the top of the Fate pile. She held it up. It showed two long black arrows curving around so that they pointed at each other

"What does it mean?" Rmily asked Kyle

"It's a Switch card," he explained "You mattel characters. You've not a Goth own. You switch o the dragon.

"Yessas! I'm the dragon now!" Emily declare: bannily

I shut my eyes. And pletored my dream again The howling rearing figures, so exty and strange battling arross top beditten.

I don't like this, I shought I don't want to be playing this game.

When I opened my eyes, Kyle was shoving do like marks the table to Emily. "Power up," he is strong your dragen is. He anickered. "You might just be a big, weak gas bar."

Emily sent the four dice rolling across the table. Two sixes, a five, and a four.

"Wow! Awesome!" Kyle declared, pounding the table with his big flat. "Awesome! That dragon tonot!"

I had a heavy feeling in the pit of my stomach.

"I'm still king, right!" . asked Kyle. "And I still have my army of knights?"

He modeled.

"Well I'm going to send my keights our a destroy are dragon." unnounced

I reached for the dice. Kyle poshed my hand-

"Plast it's my turn," he said. He grimed at Emily. "The Krei has decided to team up with the dragon."

"Huhī What does that mean?" I demanded

"Krole are very smart, very crafts," Kyle replied, "We know when to more to the other rate."

"But what does that ween?" I repeated,

"Fro charing my power with the shugon." he

"Yesses" Emily cried. She reached across the cable or dap Kyle a high five, "We rule"

"But that's not fair?" I protected.

Ryle bughed. "This is war, Connec".

Kyle drew a card off the cop of the deek and turned it faceup. It showed a bearded olf in a brown apron holding a wade net.

"An oif fisherman," Kyle announced. He rolled the dico. Then he turned to mo. "You're in trouble. King. The Kret has called together an army of two thousand elf fishermen. The cives meaked past your army and threw their nets over you.

"You're iddding," I mustered.

He shook his head selemaly.

"You meen I'm coptured?" I cried.

"Yes. Captured," Kyle pracounced. He shoved be dies to Emily. "The tong is explored—and here comes the dragon to finish have call." "No — wait!" , masted
But Endly volled the doce.
And from out on the street, I heard a room.
And then a woman screaming.
The squeed of car tires. A load CRASH
And then another famous sofmal rose loader and cheer

No — please not I silently prayed, watching the startled looks up my friends' faces.

Please don't let be dragon come to life.

jumped up and ran so the window.

. heard more shouts. Another car squeating to a stop.

But I couldn't see anything out the back

I turned and ran to be front door Emily and Kyte were close behind me. I pushed open the door—and neard another ferocious roar.

Not like any sound I'd ever heard before

Not the hourse, deep-throated roar of a flow or tiger. Not the bleating may of an elephant.

This roar anuscled like a low, rumbling boom of thurder that rose from deep maste an anusal's belly. If grew touder and touder until it was a roar and a shrill shinek at the same time.

I heard a cracking sound, the sound of a tree falling

More sereams.

Emily Kyle, and I bulled down my front hown. We stopped at the curl as a broad shadow swept ever the street

And rising over its shadow, I now the dragon
Tall and spiked and furious — just like the yeartrait on the game card

"I —I don't believe it!" I stammered

The slivery wings rose up on its splky back. The wings stretched suretched like a ship's salt unfinding and cut through power lines over the note of the street. Electricity cracked, and sparks flers as the lines came down.

Tilting the measure head up to smother furious rose, the dragon's butky body hunbered forward, sending the electrical potes trimbling to discrement.

The gragon stated a giant fruit and grashes a small blue car beneath it.

Neighbors were acrounding and running. heard toda cryang, I saw a car squeat out of control and upin onto someone's front town.

Kyle stood beside see, staring openmenthed of the giant, humbering creature, "A drague : read dragon," he marmared.

"We brought it here." I said, grabbing his arm "We set it loose. We have to do smoothing about it."

He thread to me, his face twisted in fear. "Describing? Like what?"

Well "

"I have an idea," Emply interrupted breath-

The dragon believed again as it crushed auother car underfoot.

"Hurry —" Emily urged. "Into the house." She started to run across the lawn.

I sook one not alimpse at the chagon to angry fames burst from its most. Then I ran after Endly, "What's your idea?" I called

She fidn't answer until the three of us were back in the kitchen. "The card," she said pasting "The dyagon card. If we shove it back in the box, maybe the dragon will disappear."

"Yes!" I cried "Remember has night! The storm stopped when we put the cards back in the box?"

"It might work," Kyle agreed.

We all jumped at the sound of a roud crash. Another tree falling? So close Raght outside the window

We dove to the lable and hegan transcraft fumbling through the cards.

"Where is it?" I cried. "Where is the dragon?"

"I left it faceup." Emily declared. "Remember?
I had it right in front of ma!"

Ryle shammed his first on the table, sending a bunch of earth flying. "It bun't here?" be cried.

I didn't give up. I flipped darough the earn's again. But Kyle was right

The dragon card had vanished.

"Now what?" Entity grouned

I heard more acreams from outside. Sirons tising and falling. Another crash of splittering wood. A chill shot down my back. I stared at a card on the cable. And had an idea.

"The Masked Knight," I murmished out road.

Emily and Kyle turned to stare at me. "So what?" Kyle enapped.

grabbed for the dire. "I m going to send a huge army of masked kinghts out to defeat the dragon," approunced.

"But " Emily eterted.

I didn't let her finish, "It's worth a try," I said. "I just need to roll a lot of power points."

Kyle slapped me on the back for engineers, ment "Good luck, Conner Roll all sixes Harry."

Another year outside. The crackle of electricity Shouts and cerrified cries oil down the street.

I squeezed the dire to my band. Shook them. Short my eyes and prayed for all sixes.

Then I lowered try hand and sent the dice tunbling onto the table.

12

h, accoons," I ranspired. Three ones and a two.

"Roll again," Emily urged. "Try again, Courte."
I started to reach for the dies again. But a matering obtains made me stop. I pushed myself away from the table and harried to the front window.

"Oh, wow," I murmured. I may five masked hulghts on the street. They moved augustical murching slowly. They held their shields in front of them with one hand. Their swords were taken high in the other hand.

Their armor gleamed in the nun—until they etepped into the ahadow of the dragon. And hen all five of them seemed to fade into the drop gray of the shadow

"Not much of an acroy," Kyle represent. "I maly you'd thrown all sixes, then maybe..."

He didn't drush his sentence.

All three of us gasped as the dragus lifted the dret two temphrasin his giant jaws—and with sharp tops of his head heaved been over the roofs the house arross the street.

The ferocious erasture lowered its best again With a year, it sent three engry bursts of crang flarace over the remaining three knights.

Shrieking in horror the laughts dropped the swords and shields, turned, and van, their screen dropping out the clanking of their system

"The drugon wirs," I muttered

And then I watched, frozen in terror, as the dragon corned its message body award my house as colled back its bess in an angry year of scook

Its shadow swept over the house as the treature lumbered outs the front laws.

"[t = it's coming here!" I choked out. "It's coning after us now!"

13

he shadow swept darkly over the house. I suddenly felt cold, deep cold, as if the dragm blocked out all the heat of the sun.

buttled and forced myself away from the wan-

Shivering, I run to the kitchen.

 could bear the dragon tumbering across my vard. Every footstep shock the house heard a tree crack and fall. Heard the crackle of electricity to power lines were out.

"It's enoung around the side of the house!" Emily shricked.

The cold, dark shadow washed over the backyard now, then over the kitchen window.

"It it followed us back here!" Kyle cried.

a raised my eyes to the kitchen whithow and saw the massive, authorities thest of the Tragon. The erenture bumped he back of the house shakir he whole house, condang cracks down the plant sitchen wolls.

It however its bean to the window snapping to present a part — and peered in with red-rimms eyes the size of basketonils.

Emily let our a terrified screech. She stumble from the window, beging out of the room, St tripped over Kyla, who was also backing every.

I let out a choked ery so a last, desperate id: theshed into my mind

Littore to the subte and everythic cards into both hands. Swept them into a single deck, my who hody shuddering.

Holding the deck in one hand, I graphyd tho br with my other hand.

Shows the cards into the box, Connor I order inverti.

Maybe maybe if you shove all the cards bainto the box. The dragon will disappear.

Like test night.

Last night, I remembered, we slift the deck rands hack into the box—and the storm stopps and all the lights come back at

The kitchen windowpene shook as the drag bumped it heavily with its shout. The red-rimay eyes glared in at us. The giant nostrik fixted.

The dragon arched its head buck.

In a second, it's going to erash right through 6 window I realized

No time. No time.
I startes to jam the cards into the box.
Dropped the box?
"Neccoo!" I attered a borrifled wail.
Fell to my knees. Grabbed the box in my shaking hand.
Struggled to shide the deck of cards in.
Pushed them, Pushed the cards into the box.
And snapped the lid abut.
Would is work?

heard a total POP like the sound of a gla-

A blinding flush of white light made all three us cry out in surprise.

Blinking, I curried to the wisdow, Morning aw light, flooded jets the kitchen

Silence out chare now

We dove to the window and peered Out.

I could see charmous, deep (not)wints ruttle the yard.

But no dragon. No drugon, It had varieted.

"Connor you're a gentual" Kyle declared, k stapped me hard on the back, so hard I near went flying through the window

Emily started to much. Before we realized it, three of as were laughing, hugging each oth glecfully We were so happy the dragon was gone.

But as I glimpeed the bus of cards on the ortehen cable, I stopped hughing "We've got to seture these to Mr. Zarwid — now," I said

"He said us the cruth," Early murawares, staring warrly at the card deck, as if it might expede at any second. "He tried to ware us how dangerous the same was. But we didn't listen."

Ryle brushed has chick blood heir back off his farehead, "If Zarwid trace the cards were so dangerous, why was be selling them at a garage sale?" he demanded.

"Good question," Emily replied softly, bor eyes will un the deck. She carned to me: "Of course, buildn't expect someone to steaf them."

I touk! feet my face growing but, "Don't worry I'd never stem strything again!" I declared, "And no roure role-playing games. From now on, I'm sticking to Go Fish!"

"We're wasting dime," Kyle said "Lec's return. the cards"

"Will you come with me?" I unked, "Muybe if all three of us go. We Zarwid won't give me such a here time."

They exchanged glances, then nodded. "Oksy. Let's go," Emily said.

I reached for the box of eards. As I picked it up, the lid shill open—and a card fell out and fluttered to the floor

I bent to pick it up.

And cried out in surprise when I saw the figure on the front of the card. "Check this out!" I cried "I didn't see this eard before."

I stood up and held out the eard so they cook see it.

"It, - it's Mr. Zarwid?" Emily declared.

Yes, There he was, his white hour glowing, his stiff white mustoche standing straight out, his round blue eyes staring out of the card at us.

"Look what it says on the back," I said I tuttle the eard over so they could see the word Wizano "It's a Wizard card," Kyle said thoughtfull; "When Hold on Zurvid. Wizard. Get it,"

You, I got it.

Zarwid is an anagram for Wizard, if you mix u the letters in Mr. Zarwid's name, you get ensure Emity graphed the card and mised it to her fac frowning at it as the studied it. "Do you think he a rept wizard" she saked.

"Marybe" I replied.

She lowered the card and her expression turns to fear. Then what do you think he'll do to when he finth out we took the cards?"

alld the Wisson card into my Tehiri pocket.

Then I tucked the duck of Re Afraid cards into a beek portest of my jeans.

The three of us stepped out the front door and started down the front lawn.

We stopped at the girest, faller maple tree at the curb. It had toppled over power lines. The torn wires buzzed and crackted, sending a shower of aparts over the sidewalk.

Across the street, I saw a red hook of crushed meta. "That used to be a car" I maximused to my fineads

They gazes symmouthed at the wreckage and destruction all down the block Crashed cars. Top-pled trees and power lines. Heap holes in the same. Broken hedges. Trampled flower bads.

Three police cars blocked off the street. The re-lights on their roofs tashing silently

People haddled in small groups, crying, chatter ing excitedly puinting to the demaged houses are creshed care, challing their heads in bewildermen and shock

"We did this," I muttered, "It's all our fault "

"I can't believe it," Easily replied is a tremblic voice "I can't believe that card game is so sell."

I saw a group of neighbors watching on. I won dered if they know that we were the guilty ones. was the one who stole the evil cards. We were the ones who made the knights and soluters an dragon appear.

What would happen to my friends and me people found out*

What would people do to us? Would chey our if parents? Would my purents have to pay for all the damage?

What would my parents do to me?

The questions sent a wave of cold panic over m My legs suddenly felt weak, if tried to block awars, sudden that need.

We passed the police squad ears. I could be their realise cracking. Dark-uniformed office work walking up and down the street, checkle out the deep fortprints in the payement, scratcing their heads, their expressions puzzled.

As we reached the curner, Mr. Zarwid's hou came into view. The front door was shut and t numbers were all durk. The membry newspaper unit my to the driveway.

"Look Zarwad's house in perfectly okay."

Kyle eald, pointing, "And his yard is too."

I touched the decir of cards in my back pocket. "I hope he's home," I murmured. "I really want to get rid of these cards."

We grouped the street, and made our way over he neatly trimmed awn to his front door.

I peered into the window. But the reflection of the size formed a gold curvain over it.

Taking a deep breath, I climbed the three less steps and pushed the dearball I could hear it chine inside the house.

"ldv. Zurwid? Are you burea?" I called, my voice choked and abril. My Zarwid"

No reply:

No factateps in the house. Not a smind.

I pushed the decribell again. And waited, My hands were sundenly rec-cold, I could feet the blood outsing at my temples.

Of course you're afraid, Comicz, I told myself He'n a wished. He has strange, magical powers. Maybe he's an eyn wizard.

And I stole something that belongs to him.

"Hear anything?" Kyle called from the walk. He und banily had bung back. Now they buddled close together, watching site med the bell again. Then I pounded the front good with my fist

To my surprise, the door swing open.

"Hey!" I cried out.

I polsed my head inside The front of the hou atood in durkness. I took a deep broath — a smelled a sharp, sweet aroms. Specy.

"Mr. Zarwid?" i called. My voice exhord is rowly in the durkness.

I took another deep breath, trying to slow a racing heart. Then I pushed the door open a litfarther and stepped into the front hall.

"Hellitto" | called "Anybody home"

I jumped back when I heard the chritt peak taughter from the front room.

bricked toward the door and humped outo-Emily and Kyle, who had followed me inside:

"He has nere." I stanmered. "He's bughing!"

Another high, shrill laugh.

"That councie like a beby." Emply whispered. clinging close to me, "To un animat."

a heard lood whoops of taughter Shelli chatter-heeping close together, we followed a beam of pale sunlight across the floor into the living room. As my eyes adjusted to the brighter light—saw a room full of old-fashioned looking furniture stiff-backed, wooden chains a cluttered deak; a battered paner believe, dark drapes over the windows, a cliver built restong on a small cable.

More categories.

I turned - and saw where it came from

A monkey A little brown mankey hopping up and down excitedly in a brown cage, chartering nameter

"He's so cate!" Faulty could, srepping up to the cage

The monkey stopped its shrill chattering an tilted its bead, staring out at her

"Do you think it's a pet?" Kyle asked, sysing wardy "Or do you think it used in be a person an Zarwid turned him into a mother?"

"He has always been a monkey?" a high security voice caused from behind on

Recognizing Mr. Zarwid's roles, I spun to the

He stood equinting at us with those cold, rour oyes. His normally alleked-down white hair stood up in champs around his beaut, i could see strips patential beneath his sidey tourous robe.

"Mr. Zarwid -- "I started

"What are you doing here?" he demanded a grily "What thus is it? Why did you wake me u Or did you thirk the house was empty""

"N-ma." I stammered. "We wanted to see yo ₩o —"

"Well" You're neeing me!" he cread. "To you re roully break into people's houses to see them?" "No. The door swing open," I replied. "We didn't break in." kyle added, trying to help me. "We rang the hell several times."

"It's true," Earnly added.

Mr. Zarwid rubbed his chin. Then he straightened his mustache, still scowling at us. "I think I know why you came," he said finally.

"Lib yeah," I chaked out I reached into my back packet and pulled out the box of cards "Here." I said, holding them out to him to a trembling hand.

His blue syes flashed. "So you and steal them?" he declared.

"Yes. I took them." I marmared, lowering my gyes to the floor: "I — I'm sorzy."

"And you played the game," he continued, crossing the clutteres room toward me "And you called up a dragon. And you nearly destroyed your entire block."

"I guess. I replied in a whater "We didn't

The cold eyes frase on me "You didn't mean to play the game? You didn't mean to stool my curts?" he demanded, hovering over me.

We didn't mean to wreck all the houses and ears." I choked out.

"We're really sorry." Kyle udded.

"Yes We're truly sorry," Emply channel in.

"Surry deern't cut at/" Mr. Zarwid boomed. He grabbed the box of cards from my hand. "Apologicing lan't anough," he said.

"What else can we do?" I cried. "I'm not a thief.
I've never stolen paything before. . didn't know the cards were so — so powerful! It was all just a big mistake?"

"Yes," the old wisard agreed, fingering his infotache again, his eyes still maked on mine. "Yes, it was a big missake. And now—now you know too duled."

I took a stop away from him and trumped into a high-backed rolls. "Know our much!" What do you mesm?" I demunded shrilly.

Emily and Kyle moved up beside me

Mr. Zurwid didn't snewer the question Instant a strange smile playest over his pair face. Keeping idn eyes on us, he pulled the cards from the box

"Zince you like the cards to much," he said, he smale sparsating, the thirk mustache appearing of fly up like wings, "why not like the game?"

"Luh" Leasped.

fint before I could mik what he meant, he swept his arm up and torsed the cards high in the air. Tressed them over Emily Kyle, and me.

They fluttered down, down, over us, over our beach, our shoulders Fluttered silently down

And as the cards felt durkness came down wit.

A deep, cold darkness I had nover seen or felbefore. The room faded behind it. Mr. Zarwid vanished. Emily and hyde disappeared.

I distrit move. But—felt myself ful.og: Fulling tate the dark, not the frigid cold land stallaress.

And then so explosion of pain made me stream. Pain that shot out from my chest through my same, my legs. A burst of pain that made my bend ring

My head my head

I knew it was about in explode from the pain.

My eyes papped out. My teeth flew out of my mouth.

My brain shot out through my open, acreaming month.

I know while cold durknose, I thought.

I know this chilling at liberts, be cota second to wash away before the darksem did. I felt it ware of warmth. I blinked Openes my syes.

Life death

Starres into chareout black. They pimpwick agists ghimmered in the black.

Stauts"

Yee, I stared up at a starry, cloudless sky The wind stirred. It flutcered my hair

I'm on my knees, I realised. On my hands and knees in tall, damp graze.

The six simplied so fresh, so except

Pro slive*

I beard a groun. The group routing baside me

Emily crawlest into view. She narrowed he ever at me as if the district recognize are. She that grown from her hair "Lonnor, where are we" she whispered,

"You's Where are we?" Kyle followed her out of the tall grass.

"We're okay" I choked out, etc. fooling shales, "I thought my brain was exploding thought find."

"But where on we?" Enally demanded. "It was morning — and bow it a night."

I pulled myself up from my kness and greed wound. 'We're in a wide field." I reported. "Very fig."

Entity and Kyle stood up ano, "It's like a farm or gonething," Kyle marmatrial.

Reycond the flat hold of tall grass, I now small circles of orange flame. They fires harming outside low, cound hads

"I thank it's some kind of farm village," I said. "Check out the ditto houses. I think they've made of gress or struct."

"World," Kwie muttered, finawning.

Squinting Into the gray night, I saw a tall mound of key. A wacden wagon allted down because it I have other amult, two-wheeled wagons. I heard a horse whimny somewhere in the discusses beyond the rows of little hats.

Emily sweated at a fut purple bug on her neck.

"a I don't tike it bere." she stammared. She glimbod to her feet. "I want to go home."

". .hard: we re a long way from home " I sighed "What did Mr. Zarwid say" I was so certified, I could barely beer him.

"Fig said, "Why not live the game!" Kyle reported. "Then he cossed the cards over us. And here we are."

"You mean wo're on the game?" Emily cried "We're in come und with masked knughts and fire breathing drugons?"

"That's impossible," I muttered.

enting his eyes. "It's impossible," Kyle echned with the eyes. "It's impossible but here with

"But - but - I sputtered.

I dropped back to my known when I heard ramping cry.

treated accepting footstage. Saw the all great

A long line of titule men came into view, mare my justice across the field. They were dressed ragged form The domeside metal behavior on the hairy heads glower dully in the startight. The carried king, pointed spears at their sales.

"Hup hup kup hup," they chanted as the marchest

"Jekeki" Kyle whenered, his eyes husging wi with share.

All three of us duried low behind the grass.

"I recognize them from the cards," he wh pered "They're evil They're "

"I read the back of the card," Early whaper shaddering. "They're avil housers, right? A shey're candidate. They eat integers."

up hup hup hup hep"

Haved in hower as they came marching toward us, spears up, spears down, raising them in a steady thythm as they marched.

I took a deep breath and, ducking low behind the trill great, started to move eway.

"Africa frage Angle Atraja."

Did they see ma? I wasn't sure.

I didn't wast to find out.

I half ran, half dove through the grass. Emily and Kyle were at my side.

We made our way mently over the roft ground, rying not to rootle one call grow. Netering for any argo that the evil little men had apotted us

Where to go" Where to hide"

My neart pounded against my chest. My breath burst out an puncing graps.

The tall mound of hey attrainering stally under the pale startight, rose up at front of us like a gian creature

I didn't besitate. I didn't Jamis about it.

Lowering my bond, I down into the side of the Damp and setatchy.

I covered my eyes with one hand and pushe deeper uto the hay. It scratched my face. Prickle through my cicthes I felt sharp straws sinks due buck of my neck.

A scuttling round made me atop. I full a share what of penie in my check.

Then I realized I was bearing Emily and Ky burrowing into the buy boside mo.

"Toh, it's so med" Emily whospered.

"Hid they see 48?" Kyle neked.

of hay off my cheek. "Seath, Don't talk Just i

Silence now, except for the condehing, scuttle of the bay around us i content hear the thods of the Jokela marchi. feet. And I didn't hear their thosp hop hop?" more any chant.

Were they gone?

Or were they widting for us to come out?

Hay prickled my face. I pulled a damp stee not of my nose.

"I'm so itchy," Emily whaspered

And as she said it, I started to itch coo. My buck .. my sheat my cheeks

My akin tangled and burned.

Tinglest.

I twisted and squirmed, wrying to move the bay. I couldn't scratch, I couldn't try to rub the pointst itching arms.

I gritted my teeth. So itchy ao itchy

"Ohh " I steered a low mean when I realized why.

Fat purple bugs. I pulled one off my face. I scraped another one off the back of my hand.

I felt them on the back of my neck. Sliding downmy T shirt. Slithering over my back Handreds of them, fat purple bugs crawling arough the bay. Crawling over up

"Freeeck." I started to gag as a bug prickled across my cheek and tried to alide into my month.

I spit it out. It left a near caste on my lips. I gritted my teeth. Forced myself not to gag again.

I spit once more Scratched my face. Scratched my chest. Tried to rub my tangling back against he hay.

But at didn't help.

I'm going to itch to death: I Jought

I feit like errosping, Like betring out from uncer the hug-infested hay, screaming my lungs out, wanted in tear off my clothes. Thereoff my skin!

If never stop itching, I told myself. I'm going to lich like due for the rest of my life "I — I can't take this much longer." I heard Findy whisper from somewhere close beside me "I we got to yet our of this hap, we got to sometch " "Eschin." Kyle warned. "I think the Jekels are still out there."

I contain't stop shivering. The straw pressed against use, so wet and scretchy.

I pulled a fat bug out of my ear and then I felt one crawl up my nose No. I ordered uposif. Comor - don't eness. Don't sateze "ABAH AH AM HOOOM" efore my sneeze ended, I heard gruff shouts. Angry grunts.

No time to move. I heard a righ of foutstaps.

And then hands grabbed one roughly, wrapped pround my street, my neck — and several Jekels pulled me out from the hay.

Chattering rapidly in a language, didn't recognize the dille men paired Emily and Kylo out and aboved them hard into the open area at the side of the hay mound

They surmunded us quickly, as least a desen of them, jobbling the points of their spears at its, chattering away, their expressions hard and angry.

I scratched my chest. Pulled a long out from under my whirt and toward it to the ground. My we in ends were also scratching forcesty, politing off bugs

I could see the far buyor crawling to Emily's balt. I reached over and pulled from active of them out for bec.

Finally, I took a deep breath and turned to our expense. "Do you speak Engilsh" a cried out to a high shall yetce.

Their chattering stopped. Beneath their tangled matter heir, the Jekels recrowed heir eyes at on They kept their spears polsed

"English?" I repeated. "Anyone?"

They started at the currenady as if they didn't he have you could speak

"Let us go!" Emily eried. "We don't belong

Allense.

They edged the tips of the spears closer. The circle of Jelash closed in Early, kyle and I were forced to haddle closurgether.

I raised my eyes past the circle of little mer searching for a way to escape. Beyond them, could see only flat fields, rown of little hats, a sma fire huming outside each but.

I swattewed bard. Nowhere to hide. No way to "Ow!" I eried out when I felt the jab of a speci in very back. Lijtumpes: forwaldt.

The Jekels granted messeurgly, They poked us from behind, jabbing hand, furning as to move.

"Whos! Wart!" I cried, unable to keep the pants from my voice, "Where are you taking us?"

More grants and angry gravis. I respect forward as another spear point poked my back

"If only we had an invisibility spett," Kyle whatpered as we write faced scram the call, wet grass.
"Or maybe a Clock of Invincibility."

"This isn't a game?" I choked our. "This is read."
The Jokels forced as across the field. Showed up up to a small, bright fire outside a low but. Heal embers crackled at the bottom of the fire, aparking like jewels. The wood hissed as the flames reached our toward as posted by a strong bresso.

"What are they going to do- -cook on?" Emily grayed.

"I don't know," stammered.

"Jekels alvegs kill their food before duty eat it," Nylé Whispered

That didn't make me feet any better at all. A shudder can down my body My legs suddenly felt-like rubber.

The Jekels formed a tight line in front of ea.

• uses, a raised, keeping our backs dose to the fire.

"We come in peace!" I cried, "We mean you no hazar!"

Let us go" Emily wailed. "We don't due hare! You have no right to keep on!"

They grunted aroung themselves, ignoring as. A few of them waved short spears, pushing on even closes to the darting flumes.

They're little. We can probably push right through them," I whispered to Kyle.

He shook his bean. "But tilea, Jokels are small But they have inhuman strongth."

I sighed. "What are we going to do?"

Kyle didn't have a rhunce to answer Walleard seraptog sould. A cough And a sekel dressed white for burst out through the low doorway o

The other Jokela instantly grow silent. The reised their swords at attention. They all stere wdennly at the man from the hat

I storted him as he made his way over to us. To white for of his yest and trousers glower in th firelight. He want't dark-haired also all the other He had wavy blood here down his back and glaun ing blue eyes ander a broad forehead.

"Visitors," he send on a supprisingly drop vulo Visitors? he repeated, as if trying out the wor for the first case.

"You — you speak English?" I stammered He nodded, turning his intense gaze on m "You do not look like lonights," he said though Bully "And you do not look like Kreis."

Two Jehnie stopped saids at that their leader could move close to us. "Are you Goths?" he demanded "Are you screerers?"

The glow of the fire:ight flickered in his eyes. He presend his hands against his waist and waited for an answer.

"We - we're just kids," I sputtered.

He nurrowed his eyes, "Kirls? Kirls? Are you powerful?"

"No!" Emily eried. "We have no power at all. Let us go plesse"

"We didn't come to fight," I told him. "We are not fighters. We are students, Wo're just kids."

He rubbed his smooth chin. "Then why are you knds here"

"We we don't know." Kyle replied. "We were sent here by a wisard. We don't."

The Jekels all cried out. They reised their spears.

Their reader's eyes grew wide. "By a winerd" So you are sorrespent?"

"Nol" a percampa, "We have no powers, it sail a mintake. A horrible mistake!"

He studied us one by one. "We'll see," he mutsered firstly

He barked a command to his men. Two of the Jekels run to the next his and disappeared intide

A few seconds rater they respipeured. One of them sarried a large solver gobiet in front of lam. He held it carefully is both hands.

The leader took she goblet from him and low ered it so that we could see made. I saw a dark sig aid in the silver cup, charming, bubbling, about a boil over

"Ohis." I pulled my head back in diaguat. I specked like rotting ment

"You will drink this," the Jekste' leader do chared, reising the goblet toward ms.

"No way" I choked out.

My stomach jurched if clamped a hand tight' over my mouth.

I conditate get the michening prome out of memority it was the worst thing I ever smalled his closelying ment and cotten full and skunk odor a in one

The thick black Equit dribbted over the aido the gobiet

"Drink it quickly," the Jokel ordered. "It was teste as bad if you drink it down fast."

"But what a feet I uttered in a choked who "Polson," he replied, "A deadly posson."

I gasped. "But why?"

"It is our Truth Test," he declared. "If you drin it and survive, it means you are telling the cruth I stared at the habbling black figured. "Hat has anyone ever survived?" I crisd. He shook his head. "No. Not yet."

跡

I gagged. The foot stench from the steering cupwas choking me, settening res.

"Livink," he ordered. "You must have our fruth Test Drink it down now"

He held my bead with one hand. And with his other hand, pushed the goblet to my aps.

20 felt the but terlike liquid against to

The year stench steames over my face A dealening year made my save throb.

The goblet fell from the sekel's band. The thir liquid apread over the dirt.

Another run: The ground began to cremble.

The Jelos mader staggered back, ida eyes wit with surprise.

I Beked my lips. I could taste the poison.

My atomach heavest.

But I forgot all about it as an expressus drap turched has view.

Another rown

Another dragen appeared, hunbering over t grassy field. And then another

And I saw figures riding high on the dragor arched necks. Armored figures inding the sharp spikes on the backs of the lumbering creatures.

Krughts with swords and shields, glowing in the light from the fires.

The dragton sittleted furiously, shapping their coothy awa, tradding over the key resund, flattening it under their broad feet. A dragon stormed over the teader's but, crushing it underfoot like a paper cup.

The helmoted, armoved knights hung from the dragons tong necks, sowering themselves holding on with one hand as they swime their swords in wide arcies as the started Jekols

The field rang out with ories. The triumphant butter cries of the knights. The high, shrill shrieks of the advancing dragons. The terrified means and whimpers of the ackels.

The evil tittle men dropped their spears and ran. The leader ran after them, calling for them to stay and fight

Kyle shoved me hard. "Wow! It's just like in the game!" he attered, eyes wide with amazement

"Lat's go!" Emily cried.

And we took off, running away from the Jokels. away from the shouling, evenying snights on their dragons, away from the buts and fires.

Our feet thudded over the soft ground. We were running at full speed, running over a wide dirtield. Escaping from the butue, Escaping from the rva achels.

Breathing hard, my chest shrobbing, I turned back

The buts were all burning own bright flames Bying up against the purple right sky. The whole grawly field appeared to be to fire

The Jekels had all wanished. The imights or their dragons were whooping and cheering and swinging ,belr swords high above their heads a priumph.

"Keep going," by the urged, pulling my sleave at we ran. "Don't stop. Those knights may be on enemy too."

"If they come after us. " Emily gasped "We're stead meat."

planters hark again. In the light of the burning hale, I saw them still calebrating their victors

"It wasn't a very fair fight," I cold, taking a long deep breath of cold siz.

"Who cares?" Kyle cried. "You almost had t drink that poison."

"Ohish," The thought of it acknow me all over again

I turned and started to rup fanter.

The flat field enryed down, then tilted upluagain. A line of tail stalles rose up like a wall front of ea.

"We can hide in the communities?" I eried.

We towered our heads and dove into the tall, do stalks, aboving them saids, pushing them with or shoulders, our shoes erunching over dried leaves at our reet

The states rose up high over our heads. They crackled and creaked, bending away as we mired through them.

After a minute or so, I supped, Panning band, I surveyed by hands to my knees and saviggled to catch my breath.

All around us, the tall stalks rustled and swaved.

"We're safe here," Emily said softly: "At least for a white "

"Youh. No one can see us in here," Kyle agreed

", we never seen correlates this tall," , send, still breathing hand. "They're so chick and."

 stopped with a choked gasp when I new a stalk in front of the bogin to open.

I saw a quick movement.

A hand, A slender hand reacting out from inside the stalk

States grankled around as. Creaked and awayed.

And opened.

Hands slid out first. And then slander, durk bodtes, amouth and shary, moved out from the unitedme stalles.

Donors of alonder eitent creatures With smooth green heads No features No faces Leady green heads like ears of corn before they've been absoluted. Tweens and then hundreds of them.

The stalled creaked open, awaying softly, as the creatures moved out.

The slender dark arms stretched, stretched out from the statks like rubber. The bunds slid sround on Tightening Tightening.

"Stalker" Emily choked out, "Remember the card, Conner? They're Stalke!"

I I don't remember" I gaspect

Hands wrapped strough my chest my threat.

And tightened Tightened like vines.

"Fault hesathe "I haurd Kyle grown "Can't breache "

Laggregad und kiekrat.

But the greatures held on right y

Too menty of them. Too many to fight.

And still the statics opened, unfurled, letting toose more stient, deadly Stallor

"What can we do?" I choked out, "What can we do now?"

YOU PINESH THE STORY.

stammed the book shut

What a chear!" I cried angrily "What a stupid, stupid chear!"

My sister Amy, glanced up from her magazine. "What's your problem, black?" she demanded. "You've been reading that book for busin. I thought you liked a."

I did like lt!" I declared, showing the book away. "But it's a total chest."

Amy shook her head. Her curty blond hair bounced like a spenge.

I have carry heir too. But It's durk and the curts strenk so tight and tiny And I don't have a round head and took tike a baby doi!!

Amy is eleven, just one year younger than me. But she always acts as if she's my older sister or something. "You like all those backs with knights and dragons," she multered "Bor-rring."

"It wasn't boring it was excitant." I transted "These kids were playing a card game and

"Opon. Thrills and stulls." Amy exclamed relling her big blue doll eyes.

Do a need a slater who is totally agreeate all the one?

Yeah, Like I need a heavy want on my needs:

"But then the book grats to a really exerting part," continued "And and when it gets to tally interest at just says: good finant the story."

"Wow That as a total cheat " Amy agreed. She cheed her images he and dropped down on the floor beakle for She reached for she book. "What It called Mark?"

" the called Be Africal," I told her "it's about kid named Connor."

"Continue"

"Year. Counter Buckley. He steads a deck cards But it turns out to be a really evil card gar with dragons and knoghts and shalf."

"Look," Arey said.

"Yesh," I agreed. "It turns out that the g Connor stale the card game from as a wigard. A when Connor tries to return the cards, the wise as really sugger. So he sends Connor and his * freeds into the game."

Amy stared at me. "So they have to fight dragons?"

"Well, yeah," I replied. "But then they get raught by those weint stalk creatures. And before they can defeat them or escape, the book just ends. And it says, You finish the story."

Amy laughed. She has a high, squeaky giggle that makes my costh itch.

"I guess the nother ran out of ideas." she said.

"I goest," I replied unhapplie.

Arry picked up the book and flipped through the pages. "Oh, wow!" she exclaimed. "I found something tocked in a pocket in the back cover."

She slid her hand into the back cover and pulled out something

A deck of names.

Site handes them to me.

I turned them over and flipped through them.

Kreis dragons sekets

"It's the eard game." I exed exclusily. "It's the cards from the book! Wow!"

"Coot," Ares replied.

Her favorite word. For a few words, she tried saying "brilliant" all the sizes. Everything was "brilliant." But then she went back to "coul."

I shuffled through the cards, I started to separate the Power cards from the Character cards "Go get some dice." I told Ampt "Let's try it."

She tilted her head and equipted as me. Her spongy hair bounced on her head, "You mean try he game?"

"Sure," I replied, esparating out the Fate cards
"It'll be fan. We don't have mything sine to do — right?"

It was nearly the one of summer and Amy and

I were both practy bornd.

Mom and Dad had traveled to France for two works, but they left us behind. Our cranky grandmother was staying with no.

Early in the summer, I had a job stocking shelves to tay uncless shoe store for a few weeks. But it was do boring begged Mom and Dad to let me guit, and they finally did.

So Amy and I just hung out for the rest of the summer It was bor-rung not brillant'

"I don't know if i want to play," Arry said. "Three cards look real, y treepy."

"it'll be fun," I meisted, "The game is only a litthe creepy. It's uscitting once you get into h."

She hesitated. But you said it was dangerous."
"It's just a card game," I said. "It's like story calling. You make up the skery as you go slow."

"Well olesy. But just for a few minutes."

Any came back a short while later with four dire.

Sine dropped down across from the on the floor "I want to go first," she indicted.

Typical.

"Okay," I said. I pointed to a pile of earth facelewn on the floor. "You have to pick a character first. This is the churweter you will play for the whole game. Go shead. Pick a card." She apread the carde out and stanfied the backs
And studied them. And studied them,
"Anny — there's nothing to see!" I cried,
"You're staring at the barles!"
"Okay, exay," she mouned.
She picked a card.
Turned it over.
And the room want black

lighta^{en}

"Hey-who turned out the

"What's happeoing?"

Suideply, I couldn't breathe. I felt a heavy weight, us if someone was standing on my chest

I dropped onto my buck, gasping, choking, despendely trying to suck to air.

And then my arms and legs shot out. My chest felt about ready to burnt. My skin pulled tight against my body.

I'm being putted opent! I chaught

"Ohhhh." A long, low mean escaped my threat. I realized I could breathe again. I took savera deep, notey breaths. The siz felt cool and daubja.

"Army? Where are you? Are you okay!" I whis pored.

Pale light filtered shrough the darkness. I gesself up at a white full record low in the sky.

I turned and saw Amy, sitting on the ground, shaking her head, her hair bobbing a dased expressing on her face.

She goed up at the moon and then turned to me. "Mark - we're outside," she nouroused, "We're not home anymore."

I climbed shakily to my feet and tooked around. A cool breeze fluttered my Tablet. I saw a long flut, grossy field, stretching darkly under the pass moonlight. In the distance, I could see a tall hay mound, And beyond it, siny buts with a fire burning outside each but.

"Where are we^{ve} Anny demanded shrilly. She jumped up, dusted off the back of her shorts then grabbed my arm. "Where are well How did this happen" Where so our house?"

I considered hard. I couldn't grower any of chose creestoons.

We both grouped when we heard the heavy, kumhering footsteps.

The ground shook with each step. It sounded like steady, becoming thunder low against the ground.

"Come on?" I cried, grabbing my sister's hand. Running hard over the roughly field, I pulled her behand a clump of tall grass.

BOOM BOOM BOOM

The dragon stepped into the wide beam of arconlight. It rumbles over the field, as belly rising and falling, stander usings mused above its massive spiked aboulders.

"A - a dragon?" I graped "Just like in the etory^{()—}

With its long, pushed neck arched high, the creative kept its gass straight about. Justs abut lightly, the huge head bobbed in rhythm to the heavy footstops.

Arry squaesed my hand. We stared openmouthed at the creature as it hambered past the chang of grass

Will stope us? I wondered.

Cap d smell $\Psi \kappa^{0}$

In it rearesting for un?

No. It clomped steadly, heaving its body forward, beginet sinking toto the muo. leaving a crail of deep holes behind it.

From the safety of our hading place we wetches it move until it stepped the of the mountight over the dark horizon, and disappeared.

I waited for my heart to stop racing. Then I whispored to Anta, "I know where we are."

She was self squeezing my basil. She set go and took an awkward step back, nearly combling into a tall bash. "Get us out of here" she choked out. "I don't core where we are I just don't want up be here!"

"Wo've in the card game." I continued. I tried to swand came, but my voice creeked. Army burrowed her eyes at me. "Get serious."

"I con serious." I insisted. "That is just what happened to Connot and his Ofends in the book."

"That, was a book," Amy waited. "This is reallife! I'm scared. Mark. We have to get home. I'm really scared!"

"I'm seared too," I confessed. I pictured that dragen tromping past us, so close. So close

What if it had spetted us?

That thought sent a chill creeping down my back.

"What can we do?" Amy demanded shrilly. "How do we get back to our house? Do we say some magic words or something?"

"Magic words?" I stared at her thinking hard.

"No. No mauric wonte.

"Then what?" she screamed. "Do something! Do something: This was all your deal I didn't want to pluy the stunid game."

I grabbed her by the shoulders. "Amy stop" Calm down," I pleaded. "Don't totally less it. [7] thing of something, But if you panic..."

"It's and onto to prode" she sereomed. It is way pust panie 1 · I'm ..."

"I have an idea," I told bee still gripping her shoulders "Stop screaming and listen to me. I have so idea."

Her whole body arembled. Her eyes torked on mino, challenging me. "What? What idea!"

"The gurds," I said, thinking need, remembering what County had done. "When the took in the book showed the carde back into the best everything required to normal."

Really 97

I needed. "We just have to find the cards and the box."

I led the way out from behind the tall grees. We followed our footprints in the man back to where they ented. We had to jump over the huge deep, round footprint where the dragon had crossed our footprints.

"Here," I announced, politting. "This is where we must have landed."

The modely field shimmered under the white monthight. The breeze picked up, the siz was end and though

"I don't see any cards," Apry said in a tiny voice. We both best low and searched the ground. We reade wider and wider circles.

No carda

I sighod. "The cards must still be on the floor st. home. They didn't come here with se."

"Then how do we get back?" Amy demanded, her voice breaking. Her eyes watered over I could see she was about to start crying

"Let's start we,king," she suggested. "Let's find a town. There's got to be a phone somewhere."

I took her aboutders again and turned her around. "You don't understand," a said softly. "There are no phones. And probably no towns We're in some idnat of medieval world. With dragone and imaghts and closes and things."

Her mouth dropped open. A thry squark escaped har throat I could see she panic in her eyes.

"Amy, we'll get cut." I promised. "We'll find a way It's only a game. It's just a card game."

"Well, we'll never find a way bome if we just stand bere in this field," Amy complained

"You're right," I agreed. The cool wind made me shaver "We're not safe out here, either." I pictured the clumping dragon again.

Maybe there were more dragons who crossed this field at night.

I termed and grand at the thick forest of trees helping the clump of exergreens. "We" he safer in the forest," I said. "Maybe we can find a path that useds somewhere."

Amy noticed but didn't say anything.

We started walking. I red the way into the trees, our shoes sinking into the soft forest ground.

We had walked only a few amoutes when I stepped on comething on the ground — a log or a cree branch.

I heard a sharp enapping sound.

And a heavy not dropped from the trees, fell over as covered as "A trap!" I cried. "We're caught!"

he heavy not forced us to our knees.

I struggled to shave it away. To lift a high enough to stand.

But the thick rope was rough and cut my hands. And I couldn't budge it.

"We've get to get out!" Amy waited, "We've get to keep taying."

But we both quickly discovered that the net couldn't be reaved.

Frightening questions flashed through my mind, too frightening to share with my sister.

What if this trup was set many years ago? What, if no one checks the trup anymore?

If no one comes, we'll share to death under here, I reutized

But what if it was set recently? Who set it?

wondered. What were they trying to catch? Humass?

 shoddered as I remembered the Jekels in the story

Army and a both froze as we heard the crackle and acrape of shoes over the thick carpet of dead leaves on the forest thoo:

"Someone's coming!" I whispered, my bear pounding

"I hope ho's friendly." Amy whospered back.

A short, attocky figure stomped up to the net. I gasped as he came into clear view.

He were a shaggy suit of ture. He shood on two tegs like a numer. But his care wore printed and poked up through his tuff of black bein like pogenes. He had a man's eyes but a pig-shaped shout and long walrus tasks descending from his liplens mouth.

"Hello!" Amy called out in a ciny voice "Can you get us out of bere?"

His stared tate the trap, scratching his full of hair with long, three-fingered hands that ended a short claws.

"Helio? Do you speak English?" Amy tried again.

The arealane granted in reply, a harsh, raspy sound from deep to his stocky chest.

"Please "I started.

But a high, sharp YIP YIP YIP roade me stup.

A small, four-legged anomal eather bursting up beside the pig existers. It pipped excitedly at us and pawed at the net with slender black hooves.

It was shaped like a dog small like a dachshand, but asstrad of for, it had smooth yellow skin. As it yipped, it opened its mouth to reveal two water of tany, charp, pointed teeth.

The bigger man-creature grunted at the little creature and petted its head. The little dog creature stonged visulng and parred like a cut.

The man grabbed the net and began to org.

"He -- he's letting us out?" I cried.

But I was wrong.

Le kept Any and me tightly wrupted up fitside the net and began to one up through the forest.

We couldn't stip time. The man had meredible strength. When we dropped to our backs and tried to roll out from under he tugged harder and dragged us across the forest floor.

The little pet yipped and yapped, running ahead, then behind, circling to excitedly.

The man grunted as he tagged. Shiny gobs of wet droot run down his walrun casks, and he kept licking them off with a rong blue congue.

Army and a barryped and stombase and staggered and allot under the weight of the net. Finally, the man stopped outging and let go.

With loud night, we dropped to our knees and aquasted out through the net.

Where had be dragged us?

I saw a long, low gray stone building. It had a narrow door at one end. No windows, Hus house?

Grunting totally, licking his tucks, the men stepped up to a smaller atoms structure at the near side of the house. He pulled down a wide door in the front.

Plannes shot out of the opening, leaping toward the eky.

The man took a shove! Poked it man the fire. Stirred rapidly. Then I watched him too in more orale.

"Murk - what is that?" Any whispared.

I semilowed bard. "I think it's an over," I replied

Amy gaspect. "You mean a he's going to cook to."

I didn't reply: I stared out at the man. He was licking his tasks hangrily, starting the oven coals, making that flames usus and dance

"What are we going to do, Mark" Amy cried.
"You read the book, On you have on sire? Any idea at all"

I swallowed again. "No," I confessed "No, it don't."

he man raked the costs once again, sending glowing red embers shooting out from the blazing over. Then we beset his shovel paids and came humbering toward as.

Reneath the unirus cashs, I saw a hungry grin spread over his piglike face. The yellow dog-creature panted exemptly running in circles around the man as he approached us

My temples throbbed. My heart thudded parefully in my cheet. Desperate thoughts whirned through my raind.

"He has to lift the net now," I whapered to Army. "As soon as he lifts it — run. He can't grab as bash.

I was writing.

Without removing the net, he shoved as up to the open event. So close, the heat burned my face and I had to shot my eyes from the bright glare of the flames.

The not said off.

dend before Army and I could move, the grunting man grabbed us by the front of our shirts, one in coch hand.

Ise was so anish of lean half a foot shorter than me but his grip was so powerful, we could not struggle free.

"Noocooo pteass!" I waited, "Noocooo!"

He taygest on closer to the oven door.

"Stop" Amy thricked. "You can't You (AN't')

He granted in reply. His files showed so emotion at all Plamas jumped from the open oven door. The heat burned my skin.

Still holding as each with one hand, he began to fill to off the ground — toward the over done

The dog-creature barked excitedly, jumping upand down against the man.

And as the dog jumped, I reached down with a green and with both bands, grabbed the dog wround the middle

The dog pipped in supprise as I raised it toward are over door

The man attached a short growt.

And let go of me

I dropped to the ground hard, but held onto the pig-man's yapping pet

"Let us go!" I cried breathlessly. "Let us 20 -or I'll bake your pet!"

Anny could a step back from the oven, ber whole body brembling, her eyes on the dog.

"I'll bake him: I cried, swinging the squesting pet toward the leaping flames.

The man raised both hands He backed away. His round, dark eyes were suddenly filled with four He kept both hands high as if in surrender.

Once again, I swang the pet toward the open over

The man cried out in protest. He backed up a few more stops.

"Amy rant" I ordered. "He's going to let up go us long as he thinks this dog-thing is in deagor."

Amy besitated.

"Run" I sereamed

She took off, donning to the trees.

Still gripping the pet tightly to my chest, stepped away from the over. "Don't move!" I shouted to the pig-man. "Don't move! "I take him in, I really will!"

The man aighed Riscahoulders plumper in the feat.

I backed away souther step. Another.

Then I dropped the pet to the ground apur away, and took off after Amy.

I didn't glance back. I never ran so first in my life. I couldn't breathe I couldn't see My sega ached with every step. But a ran — ran

I caught up to Amy at the edge of a wide field of carmetates. "Reop going —"I cheked out breath-lessly. "The stalles will hide us."

"Is he following us?" Amy asked in a tiny voice.
"I don't know," I managed to reply. "I don't think so."

We plunged into the tall, dry stalks. They crackled end awayed sa we pushed through them.

After a few morates, we stopped and dropped to our knees, strugging to eatch our breath

"Now what?" Any whopered.

I opened my mouth to answer that a crackling sound nearby made me stop

My heart leaged.

I heard unother load GRACE Scraping footsteps.

अंध व्यक्ति

All around us.

The book! I remembered. The end of the Be Afraid book flushed back into my mind.

I gazed up at the tall stalks hovering over us. As a stared, they appeared to move, to close in.

"Studes" I grasped, "The Stelks — they're coming out of the communities to — to stranges as?"

A wave of terror rolled down my barty, it shap, my eyes

And beard the dry crunch of footsteps surresorting us.

The tall states swayed and bent.

Three fraces stepped into view

Three idds about our age! Two boys and a girl.

Their months opened to shock.

Huh? Who are you?" . choked out.

"Who are you" the girl demanded

Anny and I stared at them, writing for them to bare their fange spread their wings, reveal cheir clayes.

Were they medievel spansters who prowled this strange land?

"My name is Compost" one of the boys said

"These are my feiends, Endly and Kylo."

"No way!" I cried. "I read Be Afrows, I read the book. You're not real—you're just characters in the book!"

Emily laughed Kyle a big, powerful-tooking guy, shook his besid, frowning

"We're real," Connor said soleronly. "Hore. Hinch my nert."

At hold out his arm, and I pinched it. He upo

"We're not characters," Emily and unbappily.
"We're real and wo're trouped here, We."

"Did the wizard send you here?" Kyle interrunted.

Amy squinted at ham. "Wizard? We don't imore any wizard."

"Then how did you get bere?" Connur asked.

"Mark and I started playing the card game," Any repiled. "And as soon as I picked a card, averything were black and."

The cards?" Emily cried excitedly, "Did you bring the cards?"

"We mud the cards to get home," Connor explained. "Do you have them?"

All three of them stared at us imputiontly.

I sighed "No. I'm sarry: Amy and I searched for the cards. But they are not have We don't have there.

Connor grouned, "Then we're trapped here."

"We've doorood. Kyle murmared. Be grabbed a stell engely in both heads and began ripping it spart. 'Doorsed'

"We don't stand a change here," Emily said selfity "We're defenseless against all the dragage and evil knights and Ricels and Jekels and — "Her words caught in her threat. She lowered her eyes to the ground.

"Unitize" Army chimed in-

We all auroed to ben "Unique what" I adoed

"Unless we find another wizard?" Amy stated Silence for a long moment

"Yee! That's brilliant! That a awesome!" Connor declared.

"You!" Ryla agreed. "It's a great idea. There want be a wissed around here. All the characters from the same are here!"

I saughed. "So we're off to see the wizard?"

We all began singing "Off to See the Wizard," the song from The Wizard of Oz, as we made our way through the field of tall cornstalls. Commuand I led the way. I think we were all feeling bet ter, Amy's idea had given as new hope.

We were still singing when we stamped out from the stulks—and stared at an army of kirels, hundreds of them, on howeback speaks and swords drawn, walking so capture in.

turned, Grabbed Arny, Tried to run back through correspond

But at least a dozen Krein seaped down off their berses. Before we could move, they had tangjugged daggers pressed to our backs.

"Doomed," Kyle muttered ngala, shaking his head saddy "No wixard can help us now"

The Kraik reprehed as scross a wide, dark field. They kept chair day, gare raised and walked class bekind us. The rest of the army followed on chair horses.

The moon faded behind a gray curtain of clouds. The riight air grew cold and wet. My shoek sank and slid in the suft mild.

We marched for hours. My tegs ached. My throat felt purched and some Sweat ran down my forebead, into my eyes. Amy was breathing hard, struggling to been up. "Where are they taking us?" she whispered "What are they going to do to us?"

Jahrugged "Nothing good," I muttered.

"We're going to walk forever." Early com-

The field coded in a forest of tangled cress and thick bramble bushes. The Kreis forced on through the beambles along a narrow, twisting path.

Soon the trees ended and the path let us up a greep, muddy slope.

Behand us. the army of Krais began to chant

"Ин питен Но титен Но течен

I awallowed hard. My sching throat throbbed with pain A sharp pain stabled my side

I stopped for a moment, struggling to force away the pain. The tip of a dagger blade in my back forced me to start walling unin

"No majory Na mercy No mercy "The Kyels continued dear low, only chant.

The path curved around the steep slope, than ended.

We atood at the edge of a high cliff i stared down at he steep from to the modify field below

The Kreis raised their daggers. Mettered for its to keep going

"They're groung to force us off the chiff? Connot cried

The five of an valued our bands high to currender

"Please!" I should, trying to be heard over their steady chant "Please let us go! We're only kids. We didn't come here to fight you!"

*No mercy No mercy No mercy *Daggers poised, he Kreis moved forward.

We backed up. Backed up until the beek of our shoes poked over the edge of the cliff

"Yexet-bye, Mark" Amy said softly, grabbing my haid. "You were a good brother."

I started to choke out a good-hye to her

Bul instead I cried, "Hey, wait I've got an idea."

turned to Connor "Quick check your short pocket."

He equinted at use, "Huh"

"Hurry!" [cried. "Your shirt pocket. You tocket the wissed card into your market!"

"We mercy "the Kreis on hurseback chanted.
The Kreis on foot suched closer to us their coprassions cold and crust eyes set menoringly, pointing their degree blades at our chests

"How do you know that?" Course demanded.

"I read it. In he book," I cold him. "When the wixard card slid out of the hex, you tacked it into your shirt pocket

Connects hand shock as he reached into the pocket of his T-shirt and pulled out the cord.

Legald see the drawing of Mr. Zurwin on it.

"Now what do , do with it?" Conner eried, "How can it halp no"

"Dy alking to it!" Emily suggested.

"Huh? It's just a card," Connor protested.

"Throw it over the cliff," Kyle suggested. "Maybe that'll send as back home."

Connot raised his ann. Prepared to how the card down the steep drop.

No? I screamed, "Tour it up, Connor! Tear et to posces! That will destroy the wizard's reagle!"

"Yes! That's Lift Conner cried. He raised the card. Propared to tear it up,

But a strong gue, of wind awirled around no and blew the card out of his hand, out over thread?

occope!" I uttered a hourse

Our only hope Our only hope floating new the cliff edge.

Without thirdging I made a wild lesp.

My feet flew our from under me.

I gratified for the eart.

Massed

heard the kists percents above ms — and realized I was falling.

Patting chrough empty space.

With a last, frantic cry, a secure my hand out as felt.

And grabbed the wigard sard.

Grabbed it and ripped >

Ripped it as I plunged down

Ripped it to pieces.

I saw the ground rising up to meet me.
And then darkness event over everything.
So dark..., deep and silent.
And cold....
Is it working? I wondered.
Will tearing up the wizard card work?
Will it send us all home?

YOU FINISH THE STORE

don't betwee this!" I cried, "What a chest! What a total chest!"

My friend Brends lowered ber book and frowned across the table at mo. "Rose, sahhhhi" She pressed a finger to ber bips. "This is supposed to be quiet reading parted. You'll get in trouble —"

"I don't care!" I cried. "I'm so angry at this book. It — it —"

"What book!" she whispered, guzing to the front of the class. Our teacher, Miss Freed, had left the room and hadn't returned yet.

"This stupid book I bought at a garage sale," I replied, slamming the book shut. "It's called for Afroid. But it ends right at the good part. It doesn't finish the story."

"Well, why don't you take it back, Rose?"

Brends suggested. "Maybe you can get your money back."

"Good idea," I replied.

Miss Freed had returned. She stood just inside the doorway, frowning at me.

I lowered my eyes to the book and pretended to read.

After school, I decided to take Breada's advice, I tucked the hook into my backpack and rode my bike to the house down the street where I'd breight it.

Gripping the book tightly under my arm, I saugthe doorbell and waited.

A few seconds later, the man who ran the garage sale pulled open the door. He blinked in the bright sunlight. It took him a while to fects on me.

"I bought this book at your garage sale," I said, holding the book out to him. "But it has no ending. Do you think I could have my money back?"

The man wrinkled his forehead. He guard down at the book, then at me, "Come in," he said softly. "I think maybe we can make a deal."

"A deal?" I followed him into his cluttered living room.

"PU make you a trade," the man said, searching through a pile of old books and magazines stacked high on his coffee table.

He pulled out a small rectangular box and held it out to me. "Try this," he said. A thin smile spread stowly over his wrinkled face. "Some kids have told me that it's a lot of fan."

I took the box and studied it. It was a card game, it was called Be Afraid.

"Looks like for," I maximized, thening the hox over in my lund.

"I've heart it's very exciting," the man replied.
"You play it with friends."

"Okay," I agreed. "It's a trade."

I hurried back outside. Tucked the deck of curts into my indest pocket. And climbed onto my bike.

Then I turned back to the man, who stood watching me from the doorway.

"This give it a try!" I called, waving to him.
"Thenics a lot, Mr. Wardis!"